

Pierre Hill Discolates Knee During Light Drill

SQUAD HOPES TO HAVE BIG DRILL THIS AFTERNOON

Should Reach San Diego Late Tonight--Will Rest on Sunday for Game

WINSLOW, Ariz., Dec. 23.—Pierre Hill substituted end on the West Virginia University football team, discolated his knee when the team hopped off here last night for a light drill. He will probably be unfit for duty in the game at San Diego on Christmas Day. With Tallman injured, together with Hill, it places Dr. O. W. Spears in a bad position for ends. The men were denied lunch yesterday by Nat Cartmell, trainer, and a great roar went up when the order was issued.

Much of the lost time on the train was made up yesterday afternoon and last night, and the squad should arrive at Los Angeles on time this afternoon. They will have a long workout on the University of Southern California grounds.

After the workout, the team will go on to San Diego, reaching there about 10 o'clock tonight.

East Side High School players are eagerly awaiting the first real test of the season next Tuesday evening, when the Yellow Jackets will play Bridgeport High School. The Presbyterian quintet of Clarksburg is anxious to book games with independent basketball teams in this section.

The Gonzaga team is having a workout every day on the beach at San Diego. They'll be full of sand when the game starts.

The Pitt team spent an hour in Chicago yesterday on the way to the coast. Some of the boys are suffering from colds, but the trainers expect to have them in good shape when the end of the journey has been reached.

A Fine Tribute.

Christmas time is a good time to retrospect a little. Certainly after the fine season the Mountaineer football team just completed, it does not hurt to look back several seasons and recall 1919 when Earl Rogers was in his hey day as a Mountaineer player. The Chicago Examiner, under the head of Great American players, finds room for this remarkably accurate cast of the premier Mountaineer player of all time.

Back Rogers, West Virginia All-American fullback of 1919, was one of the hardest playing men that the game has produced. At the fullback position for the Mountaineers, Rogers proved himself a wonderful player. He directed his team from full, calling the signals throughout the year with excellent judgment. He was one of the brainiest field generals who has played in recent years, using his plays to their best possible advantage. This was shown in the game with Princeton, a team which was always strong defensively, when Rogers so used his plays as to run up nineteen points in the first quarter. Even after Princeton had apparently solved the Mountaineer attack, the stocky back was able, through fine brainwork, to secure another touchdown against the Tigers. The 25 to 0 score that West Virginia ran up was the worst defeat that Princeton had taken in several years. In the Centre game Rogers again, foxed his opponents with his selection of plays, taking the ball over the Centre goal line in less than four minutes after the opening whistle.

In many more ways that this, however, was Rogers a star. He was one of the hardest line smashers that has graced the gridiron. The statisticians doped it out that he set a record for plunging for all time during the 1919 season, bucking the opposing lines for 463 yards. This amazing performance was made in ten games, some of which he played for only a few minutes.

In addition to this, the West Virginia man was a wizard at throwing the forward pass with accuracy and speed, probably being the most proficient passer of the 1919 season. He was, moreover, a good kicker, and most of his boots traveled well over forty yards. Carrying the ball was Rogers' best performance and he hit the line with great fierceness, displaying the power to go plowing on even after being hit by several opposing tacklers. And, as a final accomplishment, Rogers was a superlative defensive man.

From the suspended list to make for league manager in less than a year. That one sentence sums up the climax to the career of the veteran shortstop Owen "Donie" Bush of the Washington American League team.

Just prior to the opening of the 1922 campaign Bush was suspended by Owen Clark Griffith for what was termed insubordination.

NORMAL TO OPEN SEASON AT HOME

Mining Machinery Team Booked as Opening Attraction This Evening

Fairmont State Normal School will open its home season tonight when the Fairmont Mining Machinery team will be the attraction on the Normal floor. The game will be called at 8 o'clock and it is hoped that a large number of fans will be on hand for the contest. The two teams are pretty evenly matched according to reports, and the contest should be worth seeing. Toothman's men have played two games thus far this season. They were returned winners in each contest, one being played at Sutton and the other at Gassaway.

Toothman has the best material this season that he has had at the Normal for some time, and hopes to take the opening home game. Not only is the material good at the Normal, but it is plentiful. There are many substitutes ready for duty should any of the regular men be unfit for play at any time.

The Mining Machinery Indians have been working hard for the last two weeks and are reported to be in splendid condition for the game tonight.

KIRK, STELLAR END, DIES AT YPSILANTI

Local football fans will be sorry to learn that Bernard Kirk, who played such a wonderful game at end for Michigan this year, died this morning in a Ypsilanti, Mich., hospital as the result of injuries received in an automobile accident last Sunday. Kirk's skull was fractured and his chances for recovery were slight from the start.

Kirk is said to have been one of the greatest ends ever turned out at Michigan, and his work in the game this season, stamped him as one of the greatest players in the country. He was a popular selection for All-American end by a large number of critics.

Walter Camp's All-American team has not been published, so it is not known here whether or not he was given a place on the first team.

JOE LYNCH RETAINS CHAMPIONSHIP TITLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Joe Lynch of New York retained his world's bantam-weight championship last night as a result of victory over Midget Smith in a fifteen round contest at Madison Square Garden. The bout was largely a triumph for superior boxing ability over rugged aggressiveness.

Lynch clearly outpointed his rival, but displayed no decisive punching prowess, with the exception of one or two of the closing rounds. Smith, an easy mark for Lynch's rangy left, tried gamely, but ineffectually, to penetrate the champion's defense.

Billy Evans says

Frank Chance, who recently signed to manage the Boston team of the American League, has a regular job ahead of him.

Chance evidently realizes this, for he refused to affix his signature for more than one year. It is said Owner Frazee much preferred a two or three-year contract.

"One year may be more than enough for me," explains Chance. "I may early discover that baseball no longer possesses the lure it once did. If that proves to be the case I want to be able to get out with out embarrassing anyone."

Chance will early discover that his worth-while material at Boston is very limited. If a manager inherits a club that has a couple of outstanding stars, he can proceed to build around them. Chance takes charge of a team that has an unsettled infield, a rather erratic outfield, fair pitching and pretty good catching.

Mike Menosky will probably get a real opportunity to win a regular berth in the outfield. Chance likes players of the Menosky type. Mike is always trying. That will make a hit with Chance. Other managers have always insisted Mike is weak against southpaws. Mike feels that he can hit any kind of pitching if given a real trial.

Two problems that Chance will face are the cases of Howard Ehmke and "Lefty" O'Doul. Here are two players who have a world of natural ability, yet neither has attained the success that it seems should be their portion.

Ehmke comes to Boston in a trade for Rip Collins. No catcher in the American League has more stuff than Ehmke. No twirler is more feared by American League batters. Everything is in Ehmke's favor, except that he lacks confidence in the ability that opposing teams know he possesses.

Can Chance make Ehmke over? Chance has always had good pitching staffs. Realizing the importance of a brainy catcher plays in the development of pitchers, Chance has secured Jimmy Archer to coach the Red Sox pitchers.

Problem number two for Chance is "Lefty" O'Doul. For three years he has done little more than warm the bench for New York. O'Doul is a southpaw pitcher, who is fast, can hit and perform capably in the outfield. It is more than possible Chance may turn him into an outfielder and make a start out of him.

Yes, indeed! Mr. Chance has a man-size job ahead of him at Boston.
